Zero is a great Hunter / Jumper horse for any adult or child just starting to learn to ride and wants to learn to jump. He likes to keep things slow and easy until you tell him to canter or pick up the pace. He has great scoop and is smooth over the fences. Just point him at the jump and he will go over it at any speed.

Zero knows his job and he loves to work inside the arena . He has been used as a hunter/jumper lesson horse most his life riding English. We bought him 3 years ago for my 7 year old daughter (now 10) for hunter/jumper discipline. She has now taken up eventing and required a different horse so Zero became my horse and I am a western trail rider only.

Zero does have some experience out in the open but will need a stronger rider then a small child for x-country or trail riding. I have had him in a western saddle, but he is happiest riding English. He gets anxious when trail riding in a crowd of horses or camping overnight at the trail head.

The only reason I am selling him is I want him to be happy and riding me "western style" on the trails is just not doing it for him.

He has never been sick or foundered and is not sensitive to the sun. He likes to be the boss in the herd unless someone else wants to be then he backs away quickly and takes his rightful spot in the pecking order. I hate to see him leave our ranch but I really want a good ole' trail horse.
